ABSTRACT

"Bug City" is a video series created to help children learn about insects and other small critters. All aspects of bug life are touched upon including body structure, food, habitat, life cycle, mating habits, camouflage, mutualism (symbiosis), adaptations, social behavior, and more. Each program features dramatic microscopic photography, fun commentary, and bug facts. A teaching guide is also included. The topic of this lesson is bees and contains information on pollination, bee social behavior, and bee life cycle with video footage of a newborn hatching. An activity for making a bee's nest with plastic straws is also presented. (WRM)
